"TIMELINE" at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe 2013

Who are TwoBox Productions?

A new professional company formed by two Nottingham New Theatre alumni, Lauren Grant and Lawrence Bolton, TwoBox Productions aims to produce socially relevant theatre by tapping into popular culture.

Our work is vibrant, original and relatable but, above all fun. The humour from our productions comes from the reality of the situations and events we portray on stage.

What is Timeline?

Timeline is a piece of verbatim theatre with a twist. We have collected a vast number of interactions between university students across social media networking sites (with their consent) and collated these to produce a piece of theatre. Timeline follows a group of friends as they deal with love, friendship, exam stress and generally learning to live as adults. The stories formed capture the reality of human emotion in a humorous, but always honest way: from a girls (very late) first kiss to two boys awkwardly discussing sex everything on stage feels so authentic and relevant because it has been said and lived by real people. Timeline gives you the chance to read the private messages behind the otherwise extremely public domain of social media. Being so accessible, Timeline is a fresh piece of theatre with a nostalgic twist, which we believe is perfect for the Fringe.

Where are we based?

Rehearsals will be taking place between London and the University of Nottingham; however, the performances are taking place for a short run in London and then for a full run in Edinburgh

When does everything begin?

Rehearsals for the cast will begin in May. We will be taking "Timeline" up for a full run at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe 2013 in August. We will also be performing the production on 22nd and 23rd July for a preview run in London. This preview will allow us the chance to gain impressive reviews, which will enhance our publicity and notoriety for the Edinburgh Festival Fringe and have a lot of fun while doing it!
